CANDIDATE QUESTIONNAIRE, 2006

MAGGIE HAYES

DISTRICT: 4

SEAT SOUGHT: House of Delegates

Questions for Candidates:

PART I. Can we count on your support on the following issues?

Expansion of coverage to the uninsured and underinsured

1. Efforts have been made to insure more Marylanders by allowing "Association Health Insurance Plans." Proposals for such plans - thus far – would waive state-mandated benefits such as mental health and substance abuse treatment, in order to make these plans "affordable." Maryland has taken a leadership role among states in attempting to provide its citizens with needed access to mental health and substance abuse care. We believe that waiving the state-mandated benefits would be a false economy, as there is compelling evidence that the availability of mental health and substance abuse treatment in health insurance plans does not increase costs to the insurer.

Are you willing to work to support the protection of the state-mandated benefits and find alternative approaches to insuring more Marylanders?

Response: Yes

Comment: A health care plan for all has been one of the issues on which I have been campaigning. Mental Health and Substance Abuse are an important part of health care.

2. We have joined the Maryland "Health Care for All" Coalition, working to win all Marylanders access to quality, affordable health care.

Do you support Health Care for All legislation? What are your ideas about what should be done to expand insurance coverage and/or health/mental health care services to those in our state who are either uninsured or underinsured?

Response: Yes

Comment: While I was President of the United Democrats, our organization voted to support "Health Care for All". Medicaid provides for the poorer population, most middle and upper income people have health insurance, so the state needs to provide a health care system to which those caught in the middle could subscribe at a very reasonable fee.

Regulation of insurers

LCSW-Cs find that many of their clients face a variety of problems of access, choice, and privacy in dealing with their mental health and substance use treatment needs. Meanwhile, insurers have lowered allowable fees to below the “reasonable and customary charges” established in 1990. We have supported legislation addressing these issues, including expansions of state regulation of insurance companies and managed behavioral health companies.

Will you be supportive of efforts to

- a) Expand the networks of highly qualified providers by allowing increased fees and/or reimbursement rates?*
- b) Broaden coverage in the private sector to include those services currently offered mostly in the public system, such as inpatient rehabilitation, day hospital treatment, community behavioral rehabilitation, etc.?*
- c) Assure Marylanders of the privacy of their mental health and substance abuse treatment records?*

Response: yes

LCSW-Cs as qualified evaluators of mental health and functioning

Licensed Certified Social Worker-Clinical (LCSW-C) is the highest level of social work licensure in Maryland; the LCSW-C is licensed to “evaluate, diagnose, and treat mental disorders as defined in the Health General Article.” In addition, legal precedents establish that LCSW-Cs can qualify to serve as expert witnesses in court cases pertaining to mental disorders.

Legislation has established pools of professionals on which judges can draw for certain evaluations. Specialized training will be required of all clinicians in this pool, whatever their discipline. In several cases, LCSW-Cs have been excluded from this legislation, thus limiting the pool of qualified professionals available to judges and, in turn, increasing the possibility of delays for those in need of evaluation.

Would you support efforts to include LCSW-Cs - with the appropriate specialized training required by any other such clinician - in the pool of mental health professionals available to a judge for

- a) evaluation of a juvenile’s competency to participate in legal proceedings?*
- b) evaluation of Permanent Impairment due to mental disorder for purposes of Workers’ Compensation?*
- c) participation, with a licensed physician, in verifying a certificate of competency or non-competency of a disabled person, to assign guardianship?*
- d) evaluation of the competency of a patient to select a Health Care Agent through Advance Directives?*

Response: yes

Evaluation and Treatment of Mentally Retarded Clients:

LCSW-Cs are licensed to evaluate, diagnose, and treat developmental disability and mental illness, but the wording of the Maryland law regarding Mental Retardation (ie, distinguishing Mental Retardation from Mental Illness) has led to confusion about whether LCSW-Cs are authorized to evaluate, diagnose, and treat mentally retarded individuals.

Would you support efforts to include LCSW-Cs - with the appropriate specialized training required by any other clinician - in the pool of mental health professionals available to a judge for evaluation, diagnosis, and treatment of mentally retarded (developmentally disabled) patients?

Response: yes

Comment: Mentally retarded people are among those most in need of legal assistance by qualified individuals.

PART II. What are the most important concerns you might want us to address with you in the next four years?

Response: I would like a continuing dialogue on the above topics. I have a BA in Sociology and an MA in General Psychology and had a 20 year career in law enforcement. I believe I have the background and interest to work with any concerns which you may have. My daughter received her MSW last year and works for Department of Social Services in Frederick. Health care and mental health care are main topics for conversation in our family and I am supportive of all your programs.
